Short Course: Integrated Alternative Tailings Management	8:00 AM - 4:30 PM	<input type="button" value="Add"/>
This short course will provide the attendees with a basic understanding of the alternative technologies available for tailings management and methods used in the mining industry. As mining companies review current tailings management methods, there has been a renewed effort to evaluate alternative tailings methods and applications. Mining companies in Minnesota and across the world are increasingly looking to these technologies to reduce water consumption, tailings storage facility footprint, and risk. Methods for manufacturing, dewatering, transporting, and placing tailings will be discussed, including considerations for use of these technologies in cold climates. A summary of historic and current Minnesota iron ore tailings management practices, will also be discussed. The training will also include the recommended monitoring of tailings systems in the mining and mineral industries.

Short Course: 40 Years Of DNR Research: Mining And The Environment	12:30 PM - 4:30 PM	<input type="button" value="Add"/>
The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has been conducting research related to the environmental effects of mining for over 40 years. This body of work has uniquely positioned the DNR with a foundation of knowledge that can be drawn upon for technical aspects of the environmental review and mine permitting responsibilities with which the department is charged. This course will provide a refresher of key geochemical concepts and test methods typically needed for mining projects. The course will then review the history of DNR research and provide case study examples of how the information is used.

Short Course: Surface Mining Applications	12:30 PM - 4:30 PM	<input type="button" value="Add"/>
This course will give you an overall picture of key mining applications and operations. The material covered will be relevant to any mining operation regardless of the manufacturer of the equipment. Upon completion, you will be able to describe the operations of a mine site and identify the machine applications along with Best Practice to reduce your mining costs. Registration will include a copy of the CAT "A Reference Guide to Surface Mining Applications" pocket book.
